GSA Awards mLINQS MOBIS Contract

FAIRFAX, VA – (August 30, 2006) – mLINQS, LLC today announced that the General Services Administration (GSA) has awarded the company a MOBIS (Mission Oriented Business Integrated Services) contract effective August 29. Under the MOBIS program, federal agencies have the opportunity to improve their performance by using approved contractors to provide management and consulting services specifically tailored to their needs and mission goals.

“Being awarded a MOBIS contract is a major step forward for mLINQS,” said mLINQS President, Greg McIntyre. “In just three years, we’ve grown from a company specializing in consulting services for a single E-Gov initiative to software development, broad management consulting capabilities, and PMP certified project management.

“From the start, everyone at mLINQS has been results oriented. When you produce positive results for your customers, you get repeat business and referrals. We bid only those projects where we know our expertise will produce the results our customer expects. For us, this simple formula has led to our company showing a profit from our very first quarter through every quarter in business thereafter.”

GSA identifies MOBIS contactors as those that have the expertise necessary to facilitate the way federal agencies respond to the on-going stream of new mandates for their operations and such evolutionary influences as the President’s Management Agenda. Under its servLINQ brand, mLINQS provides change management, capital planning, requirement analysis, A-123 controls and systems analysis services, as well as turn-key custom software development in full compliance with the E-Gov FEA (Federal Enterprise Architecture).
